

Let the ‘Christmas Spirit’ Be a Call to Action

These are not normal times. There is no global “pause” for holiday revelries. The lunacy of the Democratic Party’s impeachment insanity is escalating, as they are now going to court to force President Donald Trump’s former White House Counsel to testify before the House Judiciary Committee, intending to manufacture more articles of impeachment. If the Senate dismisses or votes down the current articles of impeachment, which do not even name a crime which Trump has supposedly committed, then more articles may be forthcoming—an “endless impeachment” to go along with their “endless wars,” which Trump has sworn to end.

But the coup-plotters will also be spending a very nervous holiday season. The former National Security Agency Director Mike Rogers has been holding multiple sessions with John Durham, the prosecutor charged with rooting out the criminal actions of those who launched and carried out the attempted coup against the President of the United States, in league with British intelligence. Rogers, it should be recalled, reported to the FISA Court on Oct. 24, 2016 that he had uncovered significant abuses of the Foreign Intelligence Surveillance Act (FISA) by people under him at the NSA, and then more of the same abuses by the FBI and the DOJ, from 2012 to 2016. As reported below, this was done in order to “unmask” political enemies by the Obama Administration to facilitate illegal spying on literally thousands Obama’s perceived enemies—all before the “Russiagate” illegal operation even got started. The former U.S. Attorney for the District of Columbia Joe diGenova believes the Russiagate hoax was launched in order to cover up this criminal intelligence community activity under President Barack Obama.

The Congress is also continuing to sabotage Trump’s intention to build cooperative relations with Russia and China, ending the imperial division of the world once and for all. The recently passed National Defense Authorization Act declares both Russia and China to be “malign actors,” while also openly supporting the violent anarchists in Hong Kong, and repeating the wild lies about mistreatment of Muslims in Xinjiang—all this from a Congress that cheered on genocidal destruction of several Muslim nations in the Middle East which were no threat to the U.S.

And around the world, the mass strike process is not taking a holiday break either. In Europe, where farmers and workers have repeatedly shut down France, Germany and the Netherlands over the past months, protesting austerity and “climate change” idiocy, governments and private sector associations across Europe are enraged that the U.S. Congress imposed sanctions on private companies building the Nord Stream 2 pipeline from Russia to Germany.

Chile, Bolivia, Lebanon, Iraq, and more are in various states of social disintegration. Santa Claus is not likely to resolve any of this.

The danger is great—allowing a war with Russia or China in the age of nuclear weapons is both insane and suicidal. The Federal Reserve is certainly not taking a holiday break, hoping against hope that the massive money printing they launched over the last three months will at least get the banking system through the New Year—although the Western financial lords are no longer hiding the fact that the coming collapse is going to be the “perfect storm.”

But the true message of Christmas, like the true message of all great religions and cultures, is that the human being, created in the image of the Creator, has the creative power to take a crisis, be it man-made or an act of nature, and use that crisis to investigate and create solutions. This is what Leibniz meant in saying that we live in the best of all possible worlds.

Lyndon LaRouche, perhaps the greatest of all followers of Leibniz, has presented the necessary tools and policies to end this global crisis, and to build the necessary global Renaissance, which can, and must, end the imperial age of Empire once and for all. It requires that people choose to act at this pregnant moment. Let this message go forth on this Christmas Day.
